

Intermediate Dermatopathology

Specialists and Residents Course | 19-21 September 2024 | Barcelona, Spain

Description

This comprehensive dermatopathology course combines theoretical and practical aspects to emphasize the key features and the essential elements that characterize the most prevalent and significant cutaneous diseases. Special attention will be dedicated to the clues on the histopathological diagnosis of the inflammatory processes, known for their complexity in histopathology understanding, recognition, and memorization. Additionally, the course will provide clues to recognize the fundamental features of tumoral lesions

Learning Objectives

- 1) Understand the four minimum common denominators in the histology of the most prevalent and significant cutaneous diseases.
- 2) Develop the ability to identify key features distinguishing tumor lesions and differentiate between benign and malignant neoplasias.
- 3) Acquire a systematic approach to studying dermatopathology, prioritizing the understanding of essential features that characterize each process. Subsequently, explore variants and exceptional features once the foundational knowledge is well-established.
